

Forbes contributor, Kathryn Tully, to speak on fine art investing, at Jamali Gallery in New York

Kathryn Tully, author of the Forbes blog, Priceless, will speak at the Jamali Gallery in New York on the topic of fine art investing, Saturday, March 22nd, 6-8 pm.

New York, NY (PRWEB) February 24, 2014 -- Is fine art a good investment? What are the best criteria for choosing a work of art? How do I know if I am paying a fair price on a piece of artwork? Will my artwork appreciate in value?

The Jamali Gallery in Soho is pleased to welcome the journalist and Forbes contributor, Kathryn Tully, who will help answer these and other questions related to investing in fine art. Her presentation will be followed by a question-and-answer session including the artist, Jamali.

On the topic, Jamali has said, “Invest in fine art? Invest in yourself!”

“I’m looking forward to this event at this extraordinary gallery in New York. And with the artist, Jamali, in attendance, I’m sure we will have a spirited and lively discussion,” said Ms. Tully.

Ms. Tully has over sixteen years of experience as a journalist, editor, and columnist, writing on the topics of fine art, collectibles, and investing. She is a contributor to Forbes, the BBC, and her work has appeared in The Financial Times, Art + Auction, The Economist, The Times of London, The Guardian, among other publications in the U.S. and U.K. Her blog for Forbes, Priceless, is found at Forbes.com/sites/kathryntully.

Seating is limited. To reserve seats, please call the Jamali Gallery at 212-966-3335 or email Christopher Nowak, Director of Marketing, at chris@jamali.com
